BLENDED EVENT

ADVANCED HANDS-ON COURSE IN PANCREATIC SURGERY

BACKGROUND

Pancreatic surgery is increasingly becoming a specialistic branch of abdominal surgery, requiring specific cultural and technical competences. Whereas many courses and meetings are focused on the complex cultural aspects of pancreatic surgery (indications, intra-operative choices, post-operative management, etc), little attention is paid to technical details and to the execution of surgical procedures as a first surgeon, due to the poor availability of dedicated resources. The introduction of the minimally invasive approach makes it even more difficult to acquire all the technical competences needed to adequately face this challenging surgery. Consequently, there is a strong need for hands-on courses where participants have the chance to personally perform both open and laparoscopic pancreatic resections under the guidance of an expert pancreatic surgeon, in order to improve their own surgical burden. Our course, held in a well-established cadaver lab and based on the experience of high-volume pancreatic surgeons, is the answer to this need. It is targeted to surgeons interested in pancreatic surgery, who have already gained some experience in this field and wish to improve.

PARTICIPANTS

The course will be composed by a theoretical part as an e-learning course on our platform and a practical session on May 9th to 26th 2022. The theoretical part will be accessible starting from May 9th and must be completed by the practical session. During the Hands-on session, two participants will be allocated per workstation with a fresh frozen human specimen available and, working together, will personally perform both open and laparoscopic pancreatic resections under the guidance of an expert pancreatic surgeon.
